Powers & Abilities

Lady Deathstrike is a cyborg with augmented strength, speed, agility, endurance, and reflexes. Her skeleton has been artificially laced with the metal Adamantium, rendering her bones virtually unbreakable. Her fingers have been replaced with one-foot-long Adamantium claws, which she is capable of telescoping to twice their original length.

Deathstrike is able to cybernetically interface her consciousness with external computer systems, allowing for direct data access to her brain's memory centers and granting her the ability to remotely operate such systems.

Deathstrike's cybernetic systems also include a self-repair and reconfiguration program, allowing her to automatically repair damage to her cyborg body. The more damage she endures, the longer her reconfiguration program will take to repair her body.

Skills

Lady Deathstrike is also supremely skilled martial artist, considered an expert in the art of Kenjitsu and other samurai warrior skills. She is an accomplished pilot of various aircraft and seacraft, and is fluent in both Japanese and English.

Weaknesses

- Decapitation - Like Wolverine, Yuriko could be killed by decapitation, despite her healing factor.
- Excessive Adamantium- Lady Deathstrike's entire body was injected with adamantium by Wolverine, which destroyed the entire inside of her body and rendered her incapable of healing, as it not only destroyed her brain, but also hardened and cemented inside her.
- Mentally Unstable
- Loses Control/ blind rage

Personality

Lady Deathstrike is a vengeful woman often obsessed by the concept of revenge. When her father died she threw away her own life, for the sake of honor, to avenge his death, and to reclaim his lost work. Anyone wearing Adamantium in one form or another, including Bullseye and Wolverine, were suspected indirect thieves of her father's work and thus targets for assassination by her. In combat, she is somewhat fond of taunting and gloating, with hatred in her voice.

After humiliating defeats, she chose to lose her humanity in exchange for cyborg power. After becoming a cyborg, she did become colder in personality and more like a machine in many of her actions. In fact, when Rogue recently absorbed her abilities, she came to the conclusion that Lady Deathstrike is now more machine than human. Now, even more obsessed, and no longer completely honor-bound, she allied with questionable criminal elements, such as Pierce, Sabretooth and Stryker.

Cyberpsycho

Although she wants to give an impression of being disciplined and in control, she too often gives in to dubious ideas and impulses. She now seems controlled more by hate than anything else. Lady Deathstrike is, in fact, mentally unstable, which is exemplified by the fact that she easily lost control of her actions by being possessed by a computer that she had sought to control.

Equipment Lady Deathstrike formerly wore a wristband that contained instrumentation capable of detecting Adamantium.

Weapons Prior to her transformation into a cyborg, Lady Deathstrike wielded a five-foot-long electromagnetically tempered steel katana. The weapon was destroyed after it shattered against Vindicator's personal force field. She subsequently used a high-powered, long-range blaster that fired armor-piercing explosive bullets, and has also used grenades of great explosive force.
